Procedure

What does the Act govern?

The Act relates to the processing of personal data and sensitive personal data which must be processed in accordance with the eight data protection principles.

Processing is a wide ranging activity that includes obtaining, recording, holding or storing personal data and carrying out any operations on it such as adaptation, alteration, use, disclosure, transfer, erasure and destruction.

Personal data is data which relates to a living individual who can be identified from those data or from those data and other information which is in the possession of, or is likely to come in the possession of, the organisation and includes any expression of opinion about an individual. It includes information relating to an individual’s name, date of birth, address and photographs.

Sensitive personal data is defined as personal data consisting of information as to racial or ethnic origin, political opinion, religious or other beliefs, trade union membership, physical or mental health condition, sexual life and criminal proceedings or convictions. Sensitive personal data has even greater conditions for processing and normally in order to process the information it will be necessary to have the explicit consent of the individual.

The Eight Data Protection Principles

The Act stipulates that anyone processing personal data must comply with eight principles of good practice. These principles are legally enforceable.

The principles require that personal information must be:-

- Fairly and lawfully processed.
- Obtained for specified purposes and not processed in a manner incompatible with those purposes.
- Adequate, relevant and not excessive for the purposes for which it is processed.
- Accurate and kept up to date.
- Not kept for longer than necessary for the purposes.
- Secure.
- Not transferred to countries without adequate protection.
- Processed in accordance with the data subject's rights.

The Responsibilities of Home-Start

Home-Start will ensure that personal and sensitive information is processed lawfully and fairly and will through appropriate management and systems:-

- Observe fully the conditions regarding the fair collection and use of information
- Meet its legal obligations to specify the purpose for which the information is used.
- Collect and process appropriate information only to the extent that it is needed to fulfil operational needs or to comply with legal requirements
- Ensure the quality of information used
- Ensure the information is held for no longer than is necessary
- Ensure that the rights of people about whom information is held can be fully exercised under the Act. These include the right to be informed that processes are being undertaken, the right to access one's personal information, the right to prevent processing in certain circumstances and to correct, rectify, block or erase information that is regarded as wrong information.
- Ensure that everyone managing and handling personal information understands that they are responsible for following good data protection practice and is appropriately trained to do so.
- Ensure that personal information collected or used is secure.

 - Personal data held on computers or computer systems is protected by the use of secure passwords which should be such that they are not easily compromised.

If an employee discloses personal data in breach of the principles set out in the Act, he/she may be committing a criminal offence and he/she may be subject to disciplinary action.

Data in Transit

There may be occasions when it is necessary for sensitive and personal data to be taken outside of the office eg if a member of staff is asked to attend a case conference. This includes data in all formats-non-electronic(paper) and electronic (eg on PC's tablets, laptops and removable storage media- i.e. USB memory sticks, PDA's etc). All employees are personally responsible for taking reasonable and appropriate precautions to ensure that all sensitive and confidential data taken outside of the office is secure.

It is not possible to be prescriptive in this policy and procedure as to the action which should be taken to ensure security as there may be a number of different situations where data may be taken out of the office. and it will be necessary for each individual taking data out of the office to assess the security measures needed for every situation and make considered judgements in terms of how they handle data whilst delivering their service and if in any doubt seek support from their line manager. Employees must be familiar with and adhere to the Home-Start guidance on common sense precautions to be taken as a minimum requirement.

Any data loss must be reported immediately to the employee's line manager who will assess the situation and impact and agree the necessary action with the Data Protection Officer.

Contractors

All contractors who are users of personal information supplied by Home-Start will be required to confirm that they will abide by the requirements of the Act with regard to the information supplied by Home-Start.
